

SBP continues expansion; Private Client and Probate department expanded by appointment of Seigha Onyeka to London Boutique Firm

SBP Law has further expanded its capability by appointing Seigha Onyeka as a Solicitor in its private client department. Seigha brings 15 years of high-level experience to the firm and is a recognised practitioner in her field who always ensures her clients' needs are met and exceeded.

Seigha is supremely dedicated to her clients and will go well beyond expectations to ensure clients receive the best possible outcomes and provides legal service as efficiently as possible.

She has a wide-ranging practice encompassing all aspects of wills, probate and administration of estate, powers of attorney, estate planning, elder client care, Court of Protection matters including deputyship orders and general private client and property. SBP Law are delighted by the added value that Seigha brings to the firm. The death of a loved one can be an extremely emotional and a stressful time. Seigha consequently acts with compassion and understanding whilst maintaining her professionalism.

Department head and Partner, Brenda Alleyne said "Seigha brings passion, experience and knowledge to our busy private client and probate department; her practice and personality are a natural fit to our established offering. Seigha brings big firm experience with boutique firm service and excellence for all clients."

Commenting on her move to SBP Law, Seigha commented "I am extremely excited to be working at SBP Law, their unique situation perfectly supports my practice and complements the needs of my clients."
