

SBP Law continues expansion as it retains newly-qualified solicitor

As a further part of SBP Law's expansion plans, we are pleased to announce that Marcus Cohen-Thomas has qualified as a solicitor and has elected to stay at SBP Law post-qualification.

Marcus has been with the firm since September 2019 and has gained significant experience in commercial, insolvency and dispute resolution matters. We are delighted that another trainee solicitor has chosen to remain at SBP Law upon qualification. As with all our lawyers, Marcus works collaboratively with clients to achieve their objectives at the earliest possible opportunity.

His practice currently encompasses all aspects of insolvency and restructuring, commercial, and dispute resolution matters. Marcus advises commercial clients on complex litigation, having experience in the High Court and the Court of Appeal. He also frequently works with insolvency practitioners on both contentious and non-contentious insolvency matters.

Litigation Partner David Pritchard said, "Marcus has become a key part of the team here at SBP Law, and we are delighted that he will continue to service our clients as he develops his career. Before joining us, Marcus already possessed big-firm experience and is able to bring that wealth of knowledge with a more flexible and personal approach we take with our clients as part of our boutique practice."

Commenting on qualification at SBP Law, Marcus said "I am very grateful for the excellent teaching and support that I received throughout my training period, in particular the rigorous hands-on training in insolvency and restructuring matters from an expert in that field. It is an area in which I am keen to grow my practice as I continue my career."
